Free public screenings of the documentary, "Bullied: A Student, a School, and a Case That Made History," are scheduled for Tuesday, March 29th, and Thursday, March 31. The Xenia Institute and the Norman Public Schools in cooperation with the Norman Human Rights Commission are hosting the 40 minute film screenings. Both evening showings will be followed by a panel discussion and public dialogue about the issue of bullying, and how parents, educators, students, and others respond.

The film will be shown at the Mary Eddy and Fred Jones Auditorium, located in the University of Oklahoma's Fred Jones, Jr. Museum of Art, 555 Elm Avenue, at 6:30 p.m. on Tuesday, March 29, and at the Nancy O'Brian Center for the Performing Arts, 1809 Stubbeman, on Thursday, March 31, also at 6:30 p.m. The showing is free to the public and no reservations are required, although seating at the Eddy and Jones Auditorium is limited to 146 seats. Both facilities are accessible and have spaces available for wheelchairs.

"This is an excellent opportunity to continue the community dialogue about bullying, and communities' responses to that issue, that was started last fall," said Clint Williams, Executive Director of the Xenia Institute and member of the Norman Human Rights Commission.
